

CHILD'S PLAY

It is great fun having a bird-photographer for a father, especially when Daddy lets you play with the birds he photographs. And what birds! None of your fiddling sparrows and finches. These are full-blown birds of prey, some of them powerful enough to carry off lambs and young deer. But when the eagles and falcons are properly trained, even tiny tots can handle them safely. The children and birds shown in these pictures belong to Frank Wenzel, a Dane who is so serious about bird-photography that he has collected birds from all over the world to take their pictures at his leisure

*"Look Jacob, this is the way the eagle flies."
Two-year-old Edith Wenzel gives a demonstration for her brother. The eagle is not impressed*
